NO one can speak with finality as regards the present situation in business or in politics or in religion. But there is a sacred obligation laid upon all serious-minded men and women to direct their own thought and action and the thought and action of others along constructive lines.

The Committee on the War and the Religious Outlook, while conducting its general investigations looking toward final complete reports, became convinced that it would be possible to suggest, as it were, clues which workers in the religious field might follow out for themselves. Needless to say, the Committee has aimed to secure writers with special qualifications for dealing with the various subjects in the series now appearing.
